

A Two-Day International Conference on:

Translation as Profession and as Discipline

(to be organized by the Department of Translation & Interpretation, Faculty of Arabic in collaboration with HEC under the kind patronage of Rector and President of the University)

November 27-28, 2018, Islamabad-Pakistan

Rationale:

Translation Studies (Interpreting Studies included) is now an accepted academic discipline taught in the universities at various levels. Translation as practice has its roots in antiquity. In the Middle Ages translation practice and theories were taken as one entity. It drew the attention of scientists, philosophers and linguists due to its multidisciplinary nature. Consequently a long series of scientific, philosophic, linguistic, cultural and functional theories appeared in the field of Translation.

Keeping in view the fast growth and swift development, challenges and potentials, Department of Translation and Interpretation intends to hold an international conference on "Translation as practice and as discipline" exploring all the related dimensions and areas which fall under the mentioned themes.

This conference is unique in the sense that it shall be the first ever conference about translation and translation studies in Pakistan. It is hoped that the event shall attract scholars, practitioners and intellectuals nationally and internationally.

Aims and Objectives:

- to bring translation professionals and translation scholars at one platform.
- to address salient issues regarding translation as profession and translation as discipline.
- to foster a supportive environment in which researchers can exchange ideas on current themes and issues.
