Price in Pakistan Rs. 80

The Pakistani rupee that hit a record low of 90 to a dollar is under pressure due to a widening current account deficit, which stood at $2.104 billion in July-November compared with $589 million in the same period a year earlier.

The analysts attribute the rupee's record slide to the import payments, negative sentiment about the country's economic outlook and stalled IMF bailout program. Some analysts predict that the pressure on rupee might take it to Rs95 a US dollar by June 2012.

Depreciation of rupee is likely to have repercussions for the government's total debt, which would automatically increase because the public debt is presented in the rupee terms.....
