

Call for mobility grants with South Asia and Iran 2019

1. Background

The Swiss State Secretariat for Education, Research and Innovation (SERI) has commissioned ZHAW Zurich University of Applied Sciences as Leading House for the bilateral research collaboration with partner institutions in Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Iran, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka.

2. Goals and objectives

This mobility grant is designed for young scientists who seek the possibility to gain experience in international research and development projects. Recipients of this mobility grant will be enabled to build up new partnerships through personal contacts early on in their career. Such early international exchange should inspire researchers to seek international collaborations also later in their scientific career.

3. Eligibility

Mobility grants can be awarded to young scientists who

- Hold a Master's degree but no PhD yet and have not more than 6 years of professional research experience
- Are Swiss researchers who wish to enhance their career by spending time in an academic environment in one of the countries mentioned above, or researchers from the countries mentioned above to work on a project in Switzerland.

The call is open for research activities in all scientific disciplines and fields of research, including social sciences and humanities.

Host researchers must be permanently employed principal investigators at a university or research institute in their respective country.

The applicant's mobility visit should be for a duration of between 1 – 3 months.

3.1 Additional information for applicants from Switzerland

Applicants in Switzerland who wish to visit South Asia or Iran for research purposes need to be scientists with a Swiss federal or cantonal university, university of applied sciences or university of teachers' education, or a public research institution.

They need to hold Swiss nationality, permanent residence in Switzerland, residence or cross-border commuter permit for Switzerland, or be in marriage or in a registered partnership with a Swiss citizen.

3.2 Additional Information for researchers from South Asia or Iran

Applicants from South Asia or Iran who wish to visit Switzerland for research purposes need to be scientists with a government accredited, mandated or appointed university, or public research institute in their respective country.

They need to hold nationality of the country where their home institute is, permanent residence or cross-border commuter permit there, or be in a marriage or in a registered partnership with a citizen of the country where their home institute is.

4. Reciprocity

The mutual commitment of and reciprocal support by the partner institutes in both countries (i.e. Switzerland and a partner in one of the countries listed above) will serve as an indicator for the strength of the mobility grant application. This includes commitment of funds as well as in-kind resources by the involved institutes.

5. Funding and budgeting

Please note that the Leading House will disburse funds to the Swiss sending and/or host institute only. It will make no remittances to any other organization (e.g. host institution, tax authorities, insurance companies, etc.) or any individual person, whether in Switzerland or abroad. The Swiss institute will be responsible for spending the grant money in the spirit of the grant application.

Applicants should clarify as early as possible whether a stay at the host institution is subject to any conditions. For example, some host institutions ask fellowship holders to contribute a sum of money towards the institution's overhead. However, the Leading House South Asia and Iran at ZHAW Zurich University of Applied Sciences does not cover any overhead costs incurred at host institutions.

Please also clarify your status at the host institution. Some host institutes demand that visiting researchers be officially employed at the host institution. In such cases, it is possible that a portion of the grant is spent on social security contributions. The amount that ought to be available to the visiting researchers to cover their living costs thereby gets reduced. The same is applicable to costs such as insurance, tax etc.

The host institution may also ask for funds to cover the research costs (e.g. salaries, equipment etc.). Such costs must not be covered by this mobility grant.

5.1 Budget for researchers from Switzerland going abroad

The Leading House South Asia and Iran at ZHAW Zurich University of Applied Sciences can fund flights for applicants from Switzerland as well as a flat rate for work-related public transport within the destination country and, if justified, a contribution towards research and local conference costs as well as matriculation fees at the host institute (total reimbursement of actual cost up to CHF 2,500).

The hosting partner abroad should fund living allowances for Swiss candidates up to three months¹.

5.2 Budget for researchers from South Asia or Iran coming to Switzerland

For applicants from South Asia or Iran the Leading House South Asia and Iran at ZHAW Zurich University of Applied Sciences can fund living allowances, a flat rate for work-related public transport within Switzerland and, if justified, a contribution towards research and local conference costs as well as matriculation fees at the host institute (reimbursement of actual cost up to CHF 2,500 per month during maximum 3 months).

The mobility grant must not be used for travelling outside of Switzerland nor should the grant be spent in any other country but Switzerland.

¹ Known exception: For Swiss Applicants in the social sciences who want to apply for a mobility grant to visit India, please note that the Indian funding agency might only provide fund support for the period of two months. The decision lies entirely with the funding body in India.

The partner institute abroad should fund travel costs from South Asia or Iran to Switzerland and back. The Leading House South Asia and Iran at ZHAW Zurich University of Applied Sciences cannot reimburse such travel costs.
