Dr. Umer Chapra said that Islamic Economics is different from conventional economics as it derives its power from teachings of the Holy Quran of Adl which means justice for all. Islamic Economic System is based on the principle of equal, wise and justified distribution of wealth in the society. It also stresses upon fulfillment of material peods of all citizens of a state/territory without any discrimination because Islam speaks of "Rehmat-ul-Lil-Alameen" which is for all and not for Muslims only.

Prof. Khursheed Ahmad said that Islamic Economics is response to the thirst of people to live in a peace of mind which comes from spirtual peace. He added that Islamic Banking is progressing rapidly in the world and predicted that soon the Islamic Economic System shall replace present system of subjugation and suppression:

Dr. Anwar Hussain Siddiqui while introducing the guest speaker said that he was a pioneer of the Islamic Economics not only in Pakistan but in the Muslim world and non-Muslim world alike. About the IIUI, Dr. Siddiqui said that it is also marching in the same direction and the University has so far prepared thousands of experts of the Islamic Economics.

"Without accepting the challenges in improving the quality of higher education , we shall always be lacking the international compatibility, competitiveness and the capacity to innovate, which is vital to bring socio economic change in this country". This was stated by Prof Dr Anwar Hussian Siddiqui, President IIUI while giving the concluding remarks in the seminar in order to highlight the importance of Quality Assurance in higher education. Muhammad Ismail explained the need, concept and mechanism to meet the global challenges with regards to quality assurance in this area. The seminar was attended by the Vice President, all the Deans of Faculty. Chairpersons of teaching departments and Directors. The speaker emphasized that quality assurance cannot happen automatically or accidentally and it is our moral obligation to give the best possible, to our students. He introduced various essentials in details for improvement of quality including infrastructure, quality of research environment. He said that the fundamental questions that we need to ask ourselves for the quality assurance are; what are we doing (teaching and research)? Why is it being done? how well is it being done? how could we improve? what is being done? Is it in line with the national and international requirements? He identified focus areas for quality initiation such as curriculum development, improvement in delivery and assessment methods and enhancement of R&D programs of the university. The learned speaker dealt at length with the Quality Assurance mechanism through Self Assessment procedures based on the desired outcomes of the programs, University Internal Review and External reviews. Rector Fatih University, Istanbul, Turkey spoke on the Late Ottoman Thought (1700-1950) on Good Governance and its Impact on Modern Turkey, He said that the 18th and 19th Centuries represent the climax of the chaotic socio-political history of the Ottomans. Professor Fatih Rector of the University, said that the history of the Ottoman political thought can be divided into two major periods: First, the classical period which was characterized by purely Islamic political thought, and the second, which begins with the declaration of the Tanzimat reforms in 1839, the period of modernization and reforms which was characterized by combining Islamic and Western political thought and institutions. The Former Ambassador Tayyab Siddigui said that OIC acts as representative of the Muslim Ummah. He examined the previous performance and challenges faced by the Muslim world in the absence of genuine leadership, rising campaign against Islam and inability to implement its charter. OIC can achieve its status as per charter if addressed: challenge of democracy, challenge of defence of Islam and challenge of the development of the Muslim societies.

institutions measure the progress of the human societies, and then rank them accordingly in their annual reports. The purpose of the annual reports and indexes of the progress of nation states is to create a giant mirror where each country may see its own development, or lack of it, and also place itself in a global matrix. The main purpose of the human collective activities, largely guided by various types of governance models, is to create an environment of justice.Professor Tahir Amin said that the rise of Islamic militancy in the tribal areas of Pakistan has emerged as the most serious problem in the post 9/11 era. The drone attacks, terrorist incidents, suicide bombing and the penetration of external powers in Pakistan have created such an uncertainty that most Pakistanis have seriously become concerned about the continuing survival of Pakistan Dr. Professor Sobail Mahmood said that the notion of rule of law is integral to the concept of the Islamic state and the Shariah. Professor Dr. M Arif Zakaullah said that the Economic policy making is an exercise in decision making to ensure that the economy enjoys growth with stability, full employment, stable price level and trade expansion with balance of payments equilibrium. Pakistan has a different root cause. Its economy is a mixed economy dominated by elite families. The feudal elite have successfully co-opted military, media and the civil bureaucracy. This attitude towards the economic governance led to the breakup of the country in 1971 as East Pakistan became Bangladesh. On the other hand. Malaysian leadership does not come from a particular narrow elite group, the Malaysian leaders do not address the issues and problems from the narrow perspective of a particular and small elite group rather they learnt from their mistakes.

Professor Mohammad Khalid highlighted democracy in Islamic Perspective and said that it can be traced in the religious history. He related it to today's practice and how youth on campus can benefit from it. Dr. Fateh Muhammad Malik put light on democracy as a practice of campus. He assured freedom of this practice within students. He stressed upon the need of Democratization of today's youth to ensure democratic nation tomorrow. Mr. Igbal Haider and Salma Butt of BARGAD discussed structure of democracy, significance of platform and opportunities, violence. Democracy is a process which demands constant input of new ideas and views. Dr. Nazar ul Islam Dean Faculty of Social Science (FSS) appreciated efforts of BARGAD for spreading and sharing knowledge and experience about pre requisites of democracy.
